Executive Risk View by Rapid7

Speed Up Risk Reduction Across Hybrid Environments

Assessing and reducing risk across on-premise and cloud environments has become complex and cumbersome, often requiring significant time and manual effort to aggregate, analyze and prioritize a flood of alerts. Practitioners are often forced to context switch between multiple tools and translate security findings into meaningful risk metrics that the business can understand. As a result, teams are struggling with blind spots resulting from gaps in data or too much noise being surfaced without the ability to effectively prioritize remediation efforts and drive accountability across the organization.

Executive Risk View provides the visibility and context needed to track total risk across your entire attack surface to better understand organizational risk posture and trends. With a complete view of risk across your hybrid environments, teams can effectively communicate risk across the organization and track progress made in reducing risk. By establishing a consistent definition of risk across your organization you can take a data-driven approach to decision making, capacity planning and driving accountability for risk reduction across the entire business.
